And Speaking of Tea ...

I know that some of you out there are big fans of Bridgerton — the lush regency romance about to roll into the first half of its third season on Netflix, with the first four episodes dropping on May 16th. Unlike the Bake Off, this is not really my thing, but that's cool. I'm sure there are more than a few of you out there already laying out your corsets and croquet mallets for the big day.

But do you know where there are some other big fans of the show? At Red Owl Tavern, apparently, where they don't want to specifically say that they're doing a Bridgerton-inspired "Spill the Tea" cocktail menu in celebration of the premiere ... but they're totally doing a Bridgerton-inspired "Spill the Tea" cocktail menu in celebration of the premiere.

Running from May 16th through June 30th, there are new, Bridgerton-inspired cocktails to keep you amused. Drinks like the Bee Sting with its Kinsey four-year bourbon, lemon verbena honey syrup, lemon juice and Canton ginger. Or the Duel at Dawn, featuring chai tea,

An advertisement for the BeWellPhilly Health Hero Challenge. The text reads: "BeWellPhilly Health Hero Challenge BROUGHT TO YOU BY Independence". Below this, it asks "Do you know of a non-profit that could use $15,000?". At the bottom, there is a button that says "NOMINATE A HEALTH HERO". The background is a light green and white pattern.

According to the Red Owl, each cocktail will be accompanied by a pre-written “Gossip Card, sure to stir up scandalous conversations at the table.” I have no idea exactly what that means, but the bar crew at the Red Owl are really getting into it. So go! Check it out! Maybe meet some other Bridgerton fans, get loose on gin and dark rum, and maybe challenge someone to a duel. It’s summer in Philly. Anything is possible.

Now, how about some leftovers?
